About our panel:

Christel Swasey holds a BA in English and MA in Communications, both from Brigham Young University; and a kindergarten-through-postsecondary teaching certificate from University of California. She taught high school English and drama at Colton High in Colton, California for five years; taught 3rd grade in Utah for two years, and taught Freshman English and remedial English at Utah Valley University for two years. She is the mother of two step children and three biological children, some of which attend public school and some of which are homeschooled. She fights for freedom, legitimate education, teachers and children at <http://whatiscommoncore.wordpress.com>

Renee Braddy graduated in 1996 from Brigham Young University with a degree in Elementary Education and was then employed in Utah public schools as an educator for nine years. After being blessed with motherhood, she chose to stay home and enjoys her role as a full-time wife and mother. When she first became aware of Common Core and what was happening in education, she was shocked and couldn't figure out why mothers and teachers weren't talking about this. She quickly realized it was because it was all being done quickly, quietly and without them. Her mission is to educate parents and teachers!

Alisa Ellis is a mother of seven children ranging from pre-k to 10th grade. She and her husband currently live in the beautiful Heber Valley. Alisa holds a Bachelors of Science in Family, Home and Social Sciences. Alisa is the resident expert of her children's educational needs and in the Spring of 2011 became concerned with apparent changes in her children's curricula and has spent countless hours researching Utah's education grants and governing documents and presenting her findings in public forums, radio appearances, and meetings. Her diligence, attention to detail and willingness to patiently reach out to all involved parties has garnered the respect and trust of many concerned parents.
